FRIED OKRA

The music of Fried Okra could be called alternative blues. Not always considered blues by the blues audience and never considered rock by the rock audience, the band is always in between.

Nevertheless Fried Okra has toured many countries and has played for years in Copenhagen's (and Scandinavia's) number one blues bar Mojo blues Bar.

The music of Fried Okra has the same roots as Black Keys and Jack White - the Hill Country blues of the North Mississippi - but is all original.

On record it can be heard on 3 albums, Black Cherry, There's a World Outside my Door from 2013 and Back Into the River from 2015.

September 2015 the band's fourth album, Back Into the River was nominated for a Danish Music Award for Blues album of the year.

Back Into the River was well reviewed in international music magazines, among them:

Polyprisma.de, <http://polyprisma.de/fried-okra-band-auch-maenner-traeumen/>

Today Fried Okra has gone through some changes and the formation is now a guitar-bass-and drums-trio adding some one string diddley bow on the side.

"I was there that Saturday, and I experienced the best played and best sounding blues this side of the Atlantic. And the music was even original blues music. From Copenhagen!"
